

Dungannon Back in Business

For almost 20 years, CavanaghKelly has been at the heart of the community in Dungannon working with and supporting local businesses, and that has continued throughout the Covid-19 crisis

A team growing in strength

“THE team has grown considerably over the last 18 months,” Des Kelly, managing partner at CavanaghKelly accountancy and advisory practice says.

“We have had 33 new staff join us since the start of lockdown and we are still actively recruiting for other roles.”

CavanaghKelly has continued to grow, expanding its core services of accounts, audit and taxation and while developing its specialist services to ensure clients have access to the support and advice when they need it.

when they need it most.

“All of our success comes back to our people,” Des says. “If we do not have excellent people within our organisation, then we can’t deliver for our clients. We have supported local businesses from their start-up, to helping them grow, to assisting them with handing the reigns over to their next generation of leaders. And we have seen them through a global recession and global pandemic. We want CavanaghKelly to continue to be at the heart of the business community for another two decades and we can only do that with the best people onboard.”

“Our most recent senior appointments really reflect where we see the business growing and with the youthful energy that is driving our strategy forward, there is also a wealth of experience there that will not only support our clients, but also bring along our next group of leaders,” Des said.

CavanaghKelly continues to recruit for a number of roles to support its growing client base and the practice.

“It’s about being able to adapt and have the capabilities to advise our clients on the areas where they need it most, the variety of interesting roles we have available really reflect this” Des says.

“We have always had the ethos of one practice, one team, but this has never been as prevalent as it has been over the last 18 months.”

– Des Kelly

CavanaghKelly is one of Northern Ireland’s leading accountancy and advisory practices – formed in 2003 when Sean Cavanagh and Des Kelly merged their individual businesses. The practice has now grown to a team of almost 95 across its offices, which includes Dungannon, Omagh, Enniskillen and Belfast.

“We have invested heavily in our staff, and it almost goes without saying, but our people are at the centre of our success. It is the wealth of experience and expertise of the team that means the practice is able to deal with clients promptly and directly,” Des continues.

CavanaghKelly has continued to strengthen its leadership team, bringing both experience and a fresh energy to the practice. That includes Ryan Falls, partner of the practice’s Audit, Charity and Regulated Sector, Janette Burns, director of Tax, Anita Doris, director of Advisory, Shane Martin, head of R&D and Capital Allowances and Kathy Blair, senior manager Private Client.

Prior to Covid, the leadership team met to set out the practice’s strategy for the next five years and it is this investment that is part of the practice’s approach to continue to provide the advice its clients need,
